Bush Sends Aldridge To Pitcher's Box in Second Series Game

Miller Huggins Announces That George Pipgras, Right Hand Twirler, Will be on Mound for Yankees Who Strive For Second Victory at Barney Dreyfus' Forbes Field.

ANOTHER RECORD-BREAKING CROWD JAMS GRANDSTAND AND BLEACHERS

Pittsburgh Club, Hopeful Despite Setback Yesterday, Will Turn Loose Heavy Artillery Before Departure of Rival Teams for New York, Where Three Battles are Scheduled.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN.

FORBES FIELD, PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 6.—With one shot of 5 to 4 calibre sunk into its bow, but still quite seaworthy, the low, rakish craft of the Pittsburgh Pirates sailed valiantly into battle with the New York Yankees this afternoon, bent upon wreaking vengeance.

Commander Donie Bush was on deck, breathing defiance and asserting in stentorian tones that no quarter would be asked or granted. All Pirate guns would be trained, cutlasses drawn and boarding parties ready. Vic Aldridge was in the turret prepared to man the main battery. The Waner brothers, most ferocious of Pirates, were primed for hand to hand action, and Wright, Traynor and Harris emerged from the hold with fire in their eyes. "Never mind yesterday—this is another day," was the collective thought of the Pirates. They were in a nasty mood, and showed it.

Up to 12:30 this afternoon, an hour before game time, no official communique had come from Miller Huggins, leader of the confident Yanks, but it was reported at press headquarters that he would pitch George Pipgras.

Today

Floods and Power. A 3,000,000 Share Day. She Danced and Lived. Good and Beautiful.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

[The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune.]

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 6.—PRESIDENT COOLIDGE promises "to solve the problem of (Mississippi Valley) flood control, so that such a situation may never again have to be met."

It means only determination, which the president expresses, plus engineering ability and money. The country has plenty of both.

SENATOR HIRAM JOHNSON appealed to the convention of union labor in this city yesterday to work for the Boulder Dam project, harnessing the Colorado river for power, irrigation and water supply. He told the union men, "Public utilities companies say they have seven billion dollars of investment, and declare that our government shall not be permitted to build a generating dam at Boulder Canyon."

"If it takes twenty years we'll teach the public utilities that there is something bigger than seven billions of public utilities dollars, and that is the government of the United States."

FORMERLY labor, even in America, would have opposed power development by government, lest it "take bread from mouths of working men."

American labor is too intelligent for that now. In China when the British built an electric road up a steep grade they had to promise to haul only passengers, no freight. Chinese coolies, men and women, wanted to carry the freight on their heads and backs.

SOME of our big companies fear national improvement as the Chinese do. They will get over it, and realize that what helps the country helps all.

Weather Ideal.

The weather was ideal for the second world series game. It was like a mid-summer day, the sun shining brightly into the towering steel stands and upon the carefully manicured diamond. The atmosphere was balmy and the breeze across the ball park was so faint it barely ruffled the American flag atop the pole in center field.

The excitement and frenzy that characterized the opening game died down considerably today. There was no all night vigil of fans at the gates.

Shortly before noon, Nirella's twenty-two piece band, attired in scarlet coats, came upon the field and marched out to the bleachers where they entertained the spectators with the latest popular selections.

Comedians On Job.

Nick Altrock and Al Schacht, the buffoons of baseball, made a dramatic entrance into the arena bowing to the left and right like victorious bull fighters. They were received with a mixture of applause and raspberries.

Mr. Altrock at once seized the director's baton and assumed charge of the band. He led the musicians close to a box along the third base line, wherein reclined a chick-looking member of the fair sex. Altrock went into a huddle with members of the band, emerged, struck a pose before the young lady, and signalled the band to play.

"Let Me Call You Sweetheart, I'm in Love With You."

The girl gave the handsome Mr. Altrock a withering look. Undaunted, Nick tried the piece twice more but the young woman registered nothing but extreme boredom. Finally Nick turned his attention to the left field bleachers and his antics got across in a big way.

Yanks Reach Grounds.

The New York Yankees, in their gray traveling uniforms came up through a dugout a few minutes before 12:30.

GOMEZ REBELS AWAIT BATTLE AT VERA CRUZ

Mexican Government Plans Arrests and Executions.

TROOPS ON MARCH Reports That Americans are Believed Involved in Revolt.

LAREDO, Tex., Oct. 6.—Decisive movement on the part of the Mexican government and the United States forces which it is attempting to stamp out by arrest of all concerned and execution of the leaders were expected today, according to reports from Mexico City.

Some reports stated that a decisive battle was imminent near Vera Cruz where the followers of General Arnulfo Gomez, named as one of the leading revolutionists, are reported strong. Rebel forces and loyal troops dispatched to disperse them are reported nearing each other.

Another important move awaited is some official statement concerning the fate of General Gomez. Certain apparently official advices said Gomez had been captured near Fort Perote, on his way to Vera Cruz, and had been executed. These reports had not been officially confirmed today.

Conflicting reports reaching here from Vera Cruz, however, had General Gomez free and at sea, sailing from Vera Cruz to an unknown destination.

Former Diplomat Jailed.

Meanwhile the government at Mexico City continued its policy of leaving no stone unturned in its effort to capture all persons connected with the revolt. Dispatches from the capital stated that the secretary of the interior had ordered the arrest of all persons named in the following list:

DRAMATIC CLIMAX Wife on Way to Testify in Divorce Court Proceedings.

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 6.—Climaxing several years of domestic strife as "king of the bootleggers," pulled his wife from a taxicab in Eden park here today, shot and fatally wounded her, then surrendered to police. Mrs. Remus, shot once with a revolver through the abdomen, was rushed to a hospital, where an emergency operation was performed immediately by surgeons, in a vain effort to save her life.

Daughter is Witness.

The dramatic climax to the Remus' domestic warfare came as Mrs. Remus was enroute to domestic relations court, where a hearing of her divorce petition against the former bootlegger, who served terms in the Atlanta federal penitentiary and later in the county jail at Troy, O., for violation of the prohibition laws, was scheduled this morning.

Mrs. Remus filed the divorce suit nearly a year ago, shortly after Remus was released from federal prison.

Accompanied by her daughter, by a former marriage, Mrs. Remus had left an apartment hotel in a taxicab, en-

Report of the 10th annual Ohio district Kiwanis convention held at Cincinnati this week was made at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the local club in the Larkins' annex, Market street, today.

The convention was attended by Prof. Hugh F. Laughlin, delegate from the local club and also by R. C. Heddleston, international trustee, both of whom made reports.

Next state meeting of the district will be held at Cleveland in October. In the absence of Dr. W. A. Hobbs, Past President Walter B. Hill, president, Prof. Laughlin led the group singing.

Movie Director Falls Nine Floors to Death

Body of Honor Guest at Gay Party in Fashionable New York Hotel Found on Rotunda Roof.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—A gay party in the apartment of Miss Helen Greene, motion picture actress, at the exclusive Park Central hotel, came to a tragic climax early today when Paul Fairfax Fuller, 29, well known motion picture director, fell to his death on the roof of a rotunda nine floors below. Police believe that Fuller toppled out of the window by accident.

His absence was unnoticed in the Greene apartment for an hour and a half while detectives below sought to solve the mystery of his identity and determine from whence he had fallen. Fuller's friends continued their celebration upstairs. They had met to congratulate Fuller upon his success in directing a new picture.

The party, consisting of motion picture actresses and men connected with the motion picture industry, learned of the tragedy only when police knocked on the door to make an inquiry.

Miss Greene became hysterical. She could give no explanation for the accident, except that the director might have been drunk.

TWO PRISONERS AWAITING TRIP TO MANSFIELD PLAN ATTACK

Two Clubs Secreted in Their Cells at Lisbon.

ADMIT INTENT William Crawford and Robert Michael are Accused.

Sheriff George Wright yesterday frustrated an alleged jail-break plot on the part of William Crawford, Wellsville, and Robert Michael, Salem, awaiting transfer from Lisbon to the Mansfield reformatory.

Surrender Two Clubs.

The suspects surrendered two clubs which had been secreted in their cells to be used in a proposed attack on jailers, according to Wright.

Crawford was sentenced to serve from two to five years for operating a motor vehicle without the consent of the owner, George W. Runyon of Wellsville.

Michael was indicted for breaking and entering a house at Salem in the day time and committing larceny by taking a gold watch owned by Mary Starbuck. He was found guilty by a jury and sentenced to serve from one to 20 years.

Sheriff Reports to Judge.

Receiving a tip that the two men had clubs hid in their bunks at the county jail, Sheriff Wright called the two men before him under the pretext that they were to start for Mansfield.

Both Crawford and Michael finally admitted having clubs, and when they were told to go to the "bull pen" and return them to the office of the sheriff they did so. Then Sheriff Wright put the men in cells.

The incident was reported to Judge W. F. Lones, who advised Sheriff Wright to record the history of the two cases with those in charge of the Mansfield reformatory. Because of the incident the two youths will not be eligible for early parole.

AUTO STRIKES PEDESTRIAN

Mrs. Max Alpern Injured in Pennsylvania Avenue Crash.

Mrs. Max Alpern, 52, Mulberry street, is in the City hospital today suffering from injuries sustained about 6:40 o'clock last night when she was struck by a truck driven by L. T. Steepes, Lincoln avenue tinner, while walking along Pennsylvania avenue near the "Red Steps."

Mrs. Alpern, accompanied by her son, Benjamin, were enroute to the downtown district to attend Yom Kippur services at the West Third street Jewish synagogue, when the machine, also traveling westward, struck her as she was walking on the right side of the road close to the street car tracks.

Steepes stopped his machine and the woman who was rendered unconscious was placed in the machine of a passing motorist and with her son and Steepes taken to the hospital where her injuries were dressed. She regained consciousness about 8 o'clock last evening.

Captain Mason Conley who investigated the crash talked to Steepes and Alpern at the hospital. Police declare that the accident was unavoidable and have preferred no charges against Steepes.

WAILING AND LAMENTATION ON BANKS OF MONONGAHELA; PITTSBURGH FANS CRY 'LUCKY BREAKS'

BY JACK LAIT.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 6.—There is wailing and lamentation on the banks of the Monongahela today. Many of the home towners have been at it since yesterday afternoon, having writhed beneath the sackcloth and ashes of defeat continuously without the feel of a bed. It was a wild night in Pittsburgh. But it would have been frantic had the Pirates won.

The local enthusiasts are crying "lucky breaks." New York's best piece of luck was Donie Bush's stubbornness in keeping Ray Kremer in after some of the sloppiest pitching ever beheld in a big series. In the battle of the big four righthand pitchers the Yanks had the call. The expert dope was doubly reversed when the slugger was outlived and the pitching Pirates were outpitched.

I think the Yanks are the better outfit. Without their heavy guns working, they outclassed Pittsburgh's nifty but not mighty team.

Kremer Helped Lose Game

Kremer helped lose his own game when he issued two passes in the third inning. Ruth's single, Grantham's error, and a dumb throw and muff by Smith completed the rout. That was a terrible inning for the Pirates, and that was where the game passed out.

Although it would have been logical to yank Kremer at this juncture, as he would be the first batter up in Pittsburgh's turn at bat, Bush let him stay. When Kremer came to bat he doubled and scored which was fine, but he shouldn't have gone back to the box. He got the balmy Pittsburgh air two innings later. It should have been three sooner.

Ruth was easily the hitting star, though the best he got was singles. He scored two runs and figured in three Yankee rallies. Lou Gehrig was the fielding luminary. He was a demon with that right-hand glove. Ruth, however made the only sensational catch of the affray.

It was higher class technical big league ball all the way, but would have rated only as a fair game without many big moments had the stake been anything less than a world title. A foreigner watching it would have wondered why so many people ($182,477 worth) were here. He would have seen workman-like playing but few high spot thrills.

BUT 15 PER CENT OF OHIO FARMERS CARRY AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE, STATE-WIDE SURVEY SHOWS

Statistics compiled by Insurance writers throughout the state indicate that but 15 per cent of farmers owning automobiles carry automobile insurance of any kind, according to reports which have been received by the Columbiana county farm bureau.

Approximately three-fourths of the policy holders have their machines protected against fire and theft. This means that only three and three-fourths farmers out of every 100 are protected against collision, personal liability or property damage.

The National Auto Chamber of Commerce claims that of the accidents which are reported but six per cent involve tourists, the other 94 per cent happening in one's home state and 53 per cent in one's home town.

In 1925 more than 300,000 cars were stolen worth $300,000,000. About 50 per cent of them were recovered, leaving a net loss to owners of about $50,000,000. Stolen equipment amounted to as much more.

Few people carry a collision coverage which represents nearly 45 per cent of all claims. The term collision as applied to insurance is often misunderstood. Many interpret it to mean the same as property damage. Collision means the damage done to a policy holder's own car when striking another car or other movable object or if a car be damaged by another while it is parked.

WASHINGTON STEWART'S LETTER

By Charles P. Stewart.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—In his sphere as comptroller general of the United States—no job to turn up your nose at, either—J. Raymond McCarl is the most absolute boss in the federal government.

All bills against our Uncle Samuel must bear J. Raymond's "o. k." or Uncle Samuel doesn't pay 'em.

(J. Raymond has other duties, too, such as collecting Uncle Samuel's bills against other folks and adjusting claims and lots of things, but it's as an "o. k'er" of expense accounts that he comes the nearest to unqualified omnipotence.)

TIME was—before we had a comptroller general—when getting government bills "o. k'ed" was rather too easy.

The "o. k'ing" power was vested in several different individuals and a would-be collector—with a pull—generally was able to find some one among them who could be induced to exercise it.

He might do it for a friend—out of sociability. He might be bullied. He might be made to see that it would be worth his while—with a view, for instance, to reappoint. Or, if he still balked, perhaps one of his seniors could be dug up, to overrule him.

IN fact, congress finally decided that "o. k'ing" was being overdone and decided to put the brakes on.

Accordingly the post of comptroller general was created and certainly no bets were overlooked to make the incumbent as independent of everybody and everything, as the well-known hog in a cold storage warehouse.

He's named by the president, but once in office, he serves for 15 years, in spite of fire, famine, and the worst freshet in the history of the oldest inhabitant. Only death, or successful impeachment proceedings, can remove him.

He can't be reappointed, so he hasn't a second term to think about. He hasn't a superior. He hasn't an equal. That he hasn't a friend goes without saying—when it's considered that a large part of his job consists in ripping heck out of thousands upon thousands of expense accounts.

He can't be coerced. He can't be vetoed.

"Final and conclusive"—that's what the law says about his decisions.

J. Raymond McCARL is the country's first comptroller general.

He's been head of the general accounting office since July 1, 1921.

The Coolidge administration has just defied him.

The administration wanted $2,000,000 to repair Mississippi valley levees immediately—without calling an extra session of congress to make an appropriation.

McCarl ruled that the money isn't available.

Of course, in a literal sense it's in the treasury, but McCarl's judgment is that it can't be taken out—legally.

The administration's taking it any way.

WHAT the administration expects, when congress does meet, is to get a bill passed declaring—some time after the money's extracted from the treasury—that said extraction was legal—retroactive legislation, as they call it.

Congress undoubtedly will go all right, but if it should happen not to, somebody would have to pungle up $2,000,000 in a hurry, for it's strictly irregular performance now, McCarl having said so, and no mistake about it.

Anybody who defies Comptroller General McCarl, in that sphere of his, does it at his peril.

Prague's building strike has proved unsuccessful.

Biltmore Boys Top Program at Ceramic

Peppy Songs and Instrumental Selections Offered in Conjunction With Picture, "Running Wild."

The original Biltmore Boys, America's foremost entertainers, with peppy songs and instrumental selections, headline the bill to be presented at the Ceramic theatre today, tomorrow and Saturday, in conjunction with the Paramount picture, "Running Wild."

presenting practically the same act as the Four Aristocrats, of Vitaphone and phonograph record fame, come to East Liverpool from the Grand theatre, Pittsburgh. Three of the boys were members of the Aristocrats.

From the Ceramic City they will go to the Paramount theatre in New York.

"Running Wild" sounds funny even when described on paper. Elmer Finch, head of the Finch family only on his income tax slip, is the hero. Elmer has a hard time getting along. At home, the Mrs. and her fat son continually nag him; at the office, his boss is never satisfied with his work.

Even Rex keeps forever at his feet, always waiting to nip him. No one has a kind word for poor Elmer except Elizabeth, his attractive daughter. And she too has her worries. Jerry Harvey, son of Elmer's employer, wants to marry Elizabeth but his father is opposed to the match because he dislikes the whole Finch family.

After much persuasion, Harvey finally agrees to give Elmer a chance at big business. If he can collect on a bill which has been due for a long time, he'll receive a nice raise in salary. But should he fail, he can say good bye to his job.

Not realizing the hard nut that has been given him to crack, Elmer walks to Barker's office with hope high in his heart. A door opens and two men come flying out. He timidly approaches and discovers that they too are bill collectors.

Elmer retires to the street in an effort to regain his lost courage. There, his eyes light on a horseshoe. Picking it up, he throws it over his shoulder for luck and it crashes through a shopwindow. Leading a crowd of angry police, Elmer starts running down the street. Finding a friendly alley, he ducks in and continues his blind run.

Suddenly, he becomes aware of laughter and applause. Looking about, Elmer discovers that he has blundered out on the stage of a vaudeville theatre just as Professor Arvo calls for volunteers. Before he can realize what is happening, Elmer has been hypnotized.

Hearing the professor inform him that he has become a "roaring lion" Elmer starts out to see if it's true. His first stop is Barker's office. Then, he heads for home—and everyone in town starts "Running Wild!" Of course, and Elmer once more regains his ordinary docile manners the laughs come even faster than they did before!

Mary Brian is featured as Fields' daughter. Claud Buchanan is Jerry; Marie Shotwell, Mrs. Finch; Barney Taskie, Junior; Frederick Burton, Jerry's father; Frank Evans, Barker; and Ed Roseman, Arvo. Roy Briant prepared the "Running Wild" script.

Victor Hugo's Guernsey home was recently turned over to a delegation of the city of Paris.

THE FOLKS WHO'LL FEED A FELLOW

THE world is not divided
By its sorrow or its joy,
But according as to whether
It'll feed a hungry boy!

When a fellow comes from calling
On his grandma or his aunts,
He likes to tuck some cookies
In the pockets of his pants.

Can he help it if he's hungry?
Not to offer things, is cruel.
Why, he'd starve without a little bite
Of something after school!

Yes, the world is well divided
Into those who do or don't;
The folks who'll feed a fellow,
And the stingy folks who won't!

LITTLE BY LITTLE.

Italy's famous leaning tower at Pisa is leaning a little harder. Scientists fear it will fall and are devising ways to save it. For centuries the famous tower has shifted only a millimeter a year. In the last nine years the rate has increased. It's like a habit of life. We grow just a little careless—perhaps a millimeter a year. But some day the rate increases and the fall is near.

FAT OR LEAN?

Good-natured, fat men are likely to be successful in business. They are at the head of big business organizations. Lean, hungry-looking men are the successful political and military leaders of the world. So say those who diagnose character from appearance. They forget that Napoleon was a little, plump man. No young man can safely choose his line of work in accordance with his physical characteristics.

Young men, figuring on success in life, sometimes take the closest easiest, most convenient job. To go into a line you do not enjoy, that you are not interested in, just because it is convenient, is dead waste. Determine the thing you are most interested in and go after that, whatever the cost and the hardship.

THE GARY RULES.

The late Judge Gary was past fifty years old when he went to New York to become head of the company which preceded the U. S. Steel corporation. For nearly 30 years after that he lived an active business life and worked hard. How did he do it? E. J. Clapp calls our attention to the 14 rules for good health given out by Gary two years ago. They are worth noting:

1. Exercise in the open air, but do it moderately.
2. Breathe deeply of pure air as much as possible.

3. Leave alcoholic stimulants alone. Take tea and coffee if you happen to like them.

4. Drink pure water.
5. Eat little meat. Eat red meats but once a week.
6. Eat little starch, fat or sweets, eat plenty of green vegetables containing mineral salts, eat whole wheat bread, eat fresh fruit, and drink milk if it agrees with you.
7. Follow regular habits.
8. Get plenty of sleep.
9. Work hard, mentally and physically, but not too long.

10. Lead a good, clean life.

11. Keep an even temper and avoid excitement.
12. Never get angry or indulge in controversy.
13. Obey the Golden Rule.
14. Eat only to satisfy the hunger, not to please the palate.

Fall Registration Days

Acting under the provisions of the state law for elections in which municipal and township officers are to be selected, the Columbiana county board of deputy state supervisors of elections has designated two days for enrollment of voters in East Liverpool, the only registration city within their jurisdiction.

The registration days are Friday and Saturday, October 21 and 22.

Registrars will be on duty in the city's 22 precincts, including the new Northside zone—Precinct F, Second ward—from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. and 5 to 10 p. m. each day.

Elector, who neglected to qualify for the presidential balloting in 1924, or a subsequent election, must enroll in order to exercise the right of suffrage at the polls on Tuesday, November 8, when they will pass upon a proposed one-mill tax levy for fire department purposes, a councilmanic ordinance prohibiting the sale or discharge of fireworks within the city limits and two statewide issues—the Marshall bill, placing village mayors and justices of the peace on a salary basis, and the initiative proposal for the establishment of a board of examiners for chiropractors—as well as name all city and township officers and three members of the district board of education.

Do not disfranchise yourself. Register October 21 or 22.

Shoe Consciousness For Men

Shoe retailers are dissatisfied because men don't buy so many pairs of shoes a year as women, and are entering upon a national campaign to improve the situation. They are going to emphasize the "distinct health and comfort advantages in a sufficient shoe wardrobe."

They propose to make men "shoe-conscious." That almost makes a man shudder. Males are pretty sensitive about their looks already. Surely they should be able to walk along the street without furtive glances at their feet, to see how their shoes look.

They ought to be able to forget their feet, as they have been able to since bootblacks disappeared from the sidewalks. It is a blessed relief not to have boys with kits running alongside of a fellow and pointing to his shoes. Are the retail shoe dealers going to start pointing now?

Not that a little pointing is really a bad thing. To tell the truth, men's shoes are not kept properly shined since the impudent shine artists stopped calling public attention to them. But every normal man will insist that he doesn't need so many pairs of shoes as a woman, because he wears shoes that fit his feet and are adapted to walking, so that they naturally last longer.

Also he will insist that men are not vain—which is not the truth. By getting at men's vanity, the designing shoe dealers will probably put it over.

Phone to Mexico

President Coolidge at Washington inaugurated direct telephone service between the United States and Mexico by a personal conversation with President Calles at Mexico City. He naturally expressed the hope that such closer contact between two countries would bring better understanding, and his sentiments were cordially reciprocated.

This is real progress. Nothing has done more than the telegraph to make friends of distant nations. The long-distance telephone, with the marvelous development of recent years, offers much greater opportunities for friendly intercourse.

Every business man knows how much easier it is to come to agreement with another business man in a telephone talk than by the distant, impersonal method of formal letters. So our big business men do more and more business over the 'phone, regardless of distance. The same method ought to work just as well in the biggest business of all, transacted by heads of governments.

Political Applesauce

An energetic young woman, only recently out of college, running for mayor of Concord, N. H., declines to pat voters on the back and kiss babies and make lavish promises.

"I have observed," she says, "that politicians are prone to give out a lot of applesauce, and some of them seem to get away with it. My policy will be to point out some of the things that should be done, and when I am elected I will endeavor to perform my duty without reference to political exigencies."

True, "some of them seem to get away with it." A good many do. This broad land just now is suffering from a regular Mississippi flood of political applesauce. And usually it works. But once in a while an old-fashioned politician is drowned in his own applesauce, while somebody new to the game, with the boldness of inexperience, wins with straight talk and a still spine.

The Powerful Katrinka—

By Fontaine Fox

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—It may be a natural reaction from the mammoth movie with glittering facades and cathedral clasp-trap, but anyway New York is going in for the thimble movie.

They are miniature places with benches and a piano or foot organ. Most of them present short reels a little bit of life and slightly highbrow with perhaps an old cross-eyed comedy or a Sennett slapstick as a relief from the gloom. The aim is to be art in the typical Greenwich Village winds or the manner.

One of the pocket playhouses is on lower Fifth Avenue and another is on Fifty-seventh street. They present comedies featuring the spiritual urge or some tragic climax with little hope of financial success. But oddly enough all are reported prospering.

They get much of the midtown overflow and offer an escape from the wearisome process of standing in line or being roped off in the back of the house. For despite the enormous new flicker palaces, the movies have not kept pace with their growing audiences.

It is only on Monday afternoon and night the movie patron stands half a show of getting an immediate seat. Saturday and Sunday the movies become well-nigh impossible to enter. And there is an increasing number who want to see only the movies and not the extravagant ballets and vaudeville.

For a time the mixture of cinema with high class vaudeville seemed likely to shunt the latter into a total eclipse, but lately there has been a renewed interest in what is known as straight vaudeville and straight movies and it seems highly probable the public wants either one or the other undiluted.

There are also many movie houses known as "revival houses" which are highly prosperous. They do not present new picture releases, but show favorites of other seasons.

An agency has been established on 42d street to make traveling well nigh perfect as well as simply grand. It is only for people of wealth who make sudden trips and do not care a hang for expenses. You merely phone and tell where you are going and on what day you wish to depart. They secure best accommodations, send for your baggage and place it in your cabin or drawing room. They attend to reservations in best hotels at your destination, see that your luggage is taken care of as well as other details. Among which is the placing in your traveling quarters of the latest editions of newspapers, magazines and a selection of latest novels. They charge 5 per cent of the entire bill.

The most embarrassing predicament of the week is reported from a film executive who has a shower bath attached to his office. He remained late the other evening, divested himself of clothes, placed them neatly on a chair and went into the shower. A cleaning woman, seeing the pile of clothes, took them to her locker, put them under lock and key and departed. The executive refreshed himself and looked for his clothes. He telephoned his home but his wife and servants were out for the evening. It was past midnight when other clothes were brought so he could go on his way.

And almost nightly some one is left behind under lock and key in a store or shop. Women as a rule grow hysterical and often have to be rescued by firemen who break through transoms, but the man merely stands at

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

More Worry for the Farmer.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 6.—The farmer is not ordinarily classed as a skilled laborer. Not until recently, when agricultural colleges began to be established, has he had any farming education aside from the experience and tradition of his forebears and his own experience. Even now some people question whether the agricultural college schooling is of great practical value.

The old-time farmer had his own ideas about seed time and harvest. He had old opinions, now regarded by the college men as superstitions about planting certain things in the dark of the moon or on certain saints' days, and the like. And he was very weather-wise. He could smell rain a week ahead and foretell by the migration of wild fowl and the actions of wild beasts whether a coming summer was going to be warm and dry or a winter hard or mild. He needed no Government Weather Bureau reports.

The coming year should prove just how versatile and capable the American farmer of today is, for he faces an extraordinarily difficult year. The farmer, although called unskilled must be highly skilled in many things.

First of all he is a capitalist, in most cases his farm being his capital and his crops his dividends. Some farmers amass substantial cash capital but most will re-invest in more land.

He must be a shrewd trader to know his best market and how to get the highest prices. He must be an efficient general manager to know how to get the best out of hired hands. He must be a traffic expert in making his shipments to market. He must know the qualities of seeds to avoid being defrauded by seed filled with tares. He must be a stockman and veterinary and he must be a financier to prevent falling into the hands of bankers. In short, although not termed a skilled man, the farmer must have skill in many lines if he is to succeed.

The growing season now,earing its close has been unusual in very many respects. Therefore it has produced extraordinary results. Crop results are all out of balance and the prices for various products at wide variance from normal.

A Disjointed Situation.

A brief survey of the agricultural situation for the whole country, made for the study of officials of the Department of Agriculture, shows how disjointed that situation is.

In the Eastern States the wheat harvest was very small. The potato crop has been reduced by blight. Corn is described as "very spotted." The hay crop promised well but heavy rains delayed and damaged it. The dairy situation is good with an increasing number of heifer calves. The fruit crop is light.

In the South rainy and cloudy weather caused good growth of cotton but increased boll weevil incidence. The damage has been very heavy. Other crops are fairly good with the exception of some tobacco sections.

In the corn belt heavy rains and the lack of sunshine caused great damage and delayed maturity by three weeks on an average. The crop is very spotty. Hog feeders are very uncertain as to how much corn there will be available to fatten their stock for market. The yield of oats is light. The reports are very pessimistic about this region.

Reports from the wheat belt show that rust, storms, and drought have reduced the crop materially. The wheat growers, with a short crop this season, expect high prices and a survey shows intentions to plant 13.7 per cent more acreage next season to make up the shortage.

The range country shows a good deal of drought but conditions generally good for the whole region. Irrigated crops are good. Forage is abundant although the alfalfa has been damaged by rains. The stock growers are optimistic.

The Pacific Coast is dry in the north but, on the whole, the grape crop is very heavy. Although there has been some insect damage the orchards are in fairly good shape. There has been considerable loss, however, in windfalls.

These statements show what problems the farmers all over the country have this year. In the East the farmer is enjoying a good dairy situation but is faced by a winter of feeding with rain-damaged hay. The Eastern farmer has very little wheat to sell.

Other Phases of Cotton Problem.

The cotton situation is especially involved. While a light crop has been caused by weevil and flood damage and therefore the planters are enjoying high prices, the general economic situation there is upset. The growing of cotton is but one angle of the cotton situation. The light crop means that there will be less work for the cotton gins, that the pickers have had reduced employment, that the compresses will not be so busy, and that the railroads will have less to haul. In a word, while the planter is benefited, other departments of the industry are injured, a situation making for reduced prosperity for the South as a whole. The planters must decide, in this situation, how much cotton to plant next spring. It is no small problem in the opinion of the best informed cotton experts.

The poor corn crop in the corn belt puts the farmers in a quandary. Much of their work has gone for nothing and it is difficult to determine how much to plant next season. The corn and hog crops are inseparably interlocked. The hog breeders lose if they breed a heavy crop of hogs and then find that there is not enough corn to feed them.

Wheat growers in that belt have been so much discouraged by this season's unfavorable weather that they don't know whether to raise spring or winter wheat. If, in the range country, the partial drought of this year is intensified next year, there is no use in breeding or buying additional cotton experts.

The Pacific Coast has had such erratic weather for the last few years, experiencing both severe drought and intense storms and floods, that a decision on what to plant is a doubtful matter.

If the farmers successfully pull through and show profits from the harvest of 1928 they will display an ability which entitles them to congratulation as highly skilled men.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c and 60c.

That Dissolves Blackheads

IS THERE NO RELIEF FROM SKIN TORTURE?

Must I Continue to Suffer the Unbearable Itching?

Are you one of those unfortunates who are going through life suffering with a skin disease, making you uncomfortable, making you less efficient, interfering with your working hours, ruining your sleep? You may have tried many things without relief. Why not try S.S.S.? For more than 100 years it has been giving relief in many forms of skin disease. Thousands of letters of gratitude prove its worth.

Without receiving any real benefit. After taking six bottles of S.S.S., I was cured of this dreadful disease. I recommend S.S.S. to anyone suffering from eczema, because I can not praise it enough for what it has done for me." Cleophas Forte, Soldiers and Sailors Home, Quincy, Ill.

S.S.S. is purely vegetable. It is extracted from the fresh roots of medicinal plants and herbs and gives to Nature what she needs in building you up so that your system throws off the cause.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

PATTERSON LOW BIDDER FOR EAST END PAVING JOB

HARKER AVENUE WORK ESTIMATE TOTALS $13,297

Allison & Harris
Company Close Second.
CONCRETE PLAN
City's Share of Cost Will be
$1,000.

George B. Patterson, Wellsville, was the low bidder for the grading and paving of Harker avenue, between Sylvan and Central avenues, bids for which were opened by the board of control Tuesday. Contract will be awarded this week.

Patterson's estimate for the work was $13,297, while the Allison & Harris Construction company offered a bid of $13,440.40. The estimate of the city engineer was $13,643.

The street will be graded and surfaced with concrete. The specifications also call for the construction of a retaining wall along the north side of the thoroughfare. The job is slated for completion before winter.

The city's share of the cost will be approximately $1,000, bonds for which will be taken by the sinking fund commission.

Nine other street improvements jobs in East Liverpool, bids for which were opened about a month ago, have not been awarded, owing to the failure of the Cincinnati bonding company which purchased the bonds to forward the money. Contracts cannot be signed until the money is in the hands of the city auditor. These jobs, in all probability, will be held over until next spring because of the lateness of the season. It was said today.

Pirates Hope

fore noon and began tossing the ball around back of the homeplate.

Babe Ruth, passing the press box, made a few crabby comments about the Yanks' victory of yesterday.

Cameras Click.

"We were terrible," he declared. "We just weren't hitting. Only six hits! Say, just watch us today."

The Pirates, in their brand new white uniforms, appeared on the field at 12:05 and began warming up their salary wings. They were grim looking and apparently in dead earnest, in contrast to the school boy antics of the Yanks.

A score of camera men herded ball players, goats and heroes alike into groups and posed them in various attitudes.

The Pirates indulged in spirited batting practice. Pitchers Yde and Dawson served straight, fast ones up to the batters, who aimed long drives at the inviting stands in right field.

At 12:35 the Pirates came off the Diamond and the Yanks began their practice. As Lou Gehrig stood back of the batting cage swinging a bat, one of the photographers crowded in too close and got himself hit in the eye. He was not seriously hurt.

Babe Ruth strode to the plate and immediately proceeded to park the first ball pitched into the right field stands. There was no applause. Ruth took a toe hold and shot another higher up into the same stand. A few fans, grudgingly, gave him a hand.

Wailing

Crowd Calls For Cuyler.

Even Ruth and Gehrig were exciting only because of what they had done rather than for what they did. They never flashed their speciality, the long wallop. Gehrig's triple in the first should have been held to a single.

To me, one of the chief figures of interest was Kiki Cuyler, sweated, idle, nervous, petulant, at the mouth of the dugout like Achilles' sulking in his tent. It's a family quarrel. But all the neighbors are in on it.

The crowd called aloud for him in the ninth inning pinch, but a feeble Brickell who hit to the pitcher was all they got. And groans were all that answered.

Had Cuyler batted, the nation's heart would have been in its windpipe with suspense and drama. And—had he hit—and had been one of Frank Merriwell ever would have dared invent. No petty quarrel should rob America of a try at such a thrill.

But—he didn't.

And so the first game goes into the records reading rather mathematical, mechanical and kickless.

But—today's another day—and at least one hero must come through. I still hope it will be Kiki.

McGUFFEY BROTHERS, AUTHORS OF FAMOUS READERS, NATIVE OHIOANS, SAYS SCHOOL CHIEF

William Holmes McGuffey and his younger brother, Alexander Hamilton McGuffey, authors of the famous McGuffey readers, may be considered native Ohioans, having been reared in the neighboring county of Trumbull, just north of Columbiana, according to F. P. Geiger, formerly of East Liverpool, now superintendent of schools at New Philadelphia.

History of the McGuffeys and their work of supplying the schools with readers which "rank second to none" was given by Geiger in a recent address before members of the Rotary club. His subject was "Back to McGuffey."

The speaker quoted from "The Old Oaken Bucket" and "Backward Turn Backward." Other paragraphs which he quoted in part as having been taken from the McGuffey readers included Scott's "Lochlinvar," Reinzi's "Address to the Romans" and "Patrick Henry's Speech Before the Virginia Convention," all of which are regarded as literary gems and masterpieces in their respective fields.

Continuing he said:

"The boys of today may have some things which their grandfathers did not have. The boys of two generations ago did not have motor cars and radios, but they did have the McGuffey readers. For patriotism and moral instruction the McGuffey readers have never been surpassed. The great dramatic and oratorical productions in these readers have developed men who could put over any proposition in any kind of situation whatsoever."

"The ancestors of the McGuffeys came from Scotland and they settled in Pennsylvania. William Holmes McGuffey was born in 1800 in Washington county, Pa., and with his parents moved to Trumbull county, Ohio, when he was but two years old. Alexander Hamilton McGuffey, who was 16 years younger than his brother, was born in Trumbull county. Dr. William Holmes McGuffey was president of Ohio university at Athens. Both brothers were connected with Miami university at Oxford and did work in the high schools and colleges in and around Cincinnati.

"William Holmes McGuffey was the lone author of the first four readers in the McGuffey series. The first and second readers appeared in 1826 and the third and fourth followed in 1837.

SHERIFF KEEPS 15 DEPUTIES

Mine Property in Belmont County to be Guarded.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Oct. 6.—Belmont county will continue to be patrolled by as many special deputy sheriffs as are needed, despite the recent order of the county commissioners withdrawing financial support, it was announced here today by Sheriff Clyde Hardesty, after a meeting with County Prosecutor Paul V. Waddell.

Fifteen men who were on duty when the county commission withdrew its support, will continue to guard Belmont county's three operating mines, the Webb, Provident and Florence properties, Hardesty said, after the meeting.

Charles Wise, president of the county commission in commenting on the decision of Hardesty and Waddell, sharply criticized Gov. Donahey for not sending troops into the troubled sections. Wise contends that the county commissioners have been advised by County Auditor Homer Findlay that they have no authority to make further loans with which to pay guards.

Belmont county already has spent $50,000 to pay additional deputy sheriffs, according to Wise. The guards are paid $5 per day.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKETS

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—A 10-point jump in the stock of the American Express company in the first period today showed conclusively that the speculative possibilities of the market were by no means exhausted.

Since yesterday noon this staid old investment stock has advanced about 20 points, and drawn the spotlight on reports that the long awaited separation of the banking and transportation companies controlling each activity. The stock sold today at 179 3/4, against yesterday's price of 160.

Uneasiness in the financial district followed rumors that the big loaning banks were scaling down the margin of loans on industrial stocks which have risen in value in recent months, and that deliberate withdrawal of money from the call loan market, rather than scarcity of funds, had accounted for the sudden tightening of call money, with the 4 1/2 per cent call loan rate.

Further declines in gasoline prices in Detroit and other important consuming centers resulted in heavy selling of Phillips Petroleum, Marland, Texas company and other of the prominent independent oils. The Standard Oils were also under pressure and moved off fractionally.

Packard's new advance to 48 1/2 was the feature of the low-priced motor shares. Buying of the stock is based on the large increase in the current output of the company. Studebaker sold up about a point, while Hudson and Chrysler were also in good demand.

"I never eat before I deliver an address," he explained. After the address that evening, the host went up to him and said, "Well, you might just as well eat."

Large crowds are attending revival services in the First Nazarene church. The charge of Rev. William O. Nease of Sioux City, Iowa.

Last night he gave a forceful and convincing sermon on the importance of believing followers of Christ laboring for the salvation of the lost. He spoke in part as follows: "If the church would get to a place where it is as much interested in the spiritual welfare of the people as the people are interested in money, then the kingdom of God would be brought rapidly into the hearts of men everywhere. That while money is important, and is just as important in the temporal world as Christ is in the spiritual world, yet men who profess the name of Christ are to become equally interested in spiritual things, as they are in temporal."

Rev. Nease has had a wide experience as a pastor, college president and district superintendent of his denomination and as an evangelist.

route to the court room. As they drove through the park, Remus in his own machine, driven by his chauffeur, overhauled the cab. The driver, after being warned by Mrs. Remus, who recognized her husband's machine in pursuit, fled from the cab, just as Remus machine pulled alongside.

Remus, according to Mrs. Remus' daughter, Ruth, 19, leaped from his machine, screaming curses and abuse at his wife, seized her as she attempted to flee and shot her through the body. Then he jumped into his own machine, and fled from the scene. Later, he surrendered to police.

The chauffeur, who was one of Remus' lieutenants in his bootlegging operations, according to police, drove Remus to police headquarters.

"I have spent thousands of dollars trying to get them together," Remus said, as he was taken into custody, referring to his wife and Franklin Dodge, former prohibition official, whom he named as co-respondent in his cross action for divorce from Mrs. Remus. "I am glad I did it, and I am only sorry that I couldn't get both of them."

A complaint of shooting with intent to kill was filed against Remus, but this was expected to be changed to first degree murder, as soon as county officials are officially advised of Mrs. Remus' death.

Taken to county jail later, Remus amplified his first statement.

"It is a mental relief to know that it is all over," he said. "My incarceration here is the penalty I owe society."

Remus face flushed. "It all shows the hypocrisy and fallacy of the prohibition movement. Anything else I have to say, I will tell to my peers, the jurors and the judges."

"Did you plan the murder in advance?" Remus was asked by an international news service correspondent.

"Murder?" he said. "Why, I've been murdered night and day, in prison and out, for more than two years."

Remus has been in the public eye since the early days of prohibitions when he established his death valley farm, near here, and purchased many distilleries. He fought the Volstead act through most of the courts of the land and eventually found himself a federal prisoner.

During this time a divorce suit was brought by his wife, Imogene. Remus countered with a cross petition and

SCHOOL PUPILS ARE CAUTIONED

Use Care in Streets is Police Head's Warning.

As a means of minimizing possible chances of injury to children going to and from their way to schools in various sections of the city, Chief of Police John Fultz today cautioned pupils to use the sidewalks, to cross at intersections and to exercise every other means of avoiding accidents.

It is difficult for motorists to drive where youngsters are in the practice of running in all directions from school and as a general rule, Fultz points out, the driver is not always to blame in cases of accident.

And, as a result of complaints from property owners, police will make every effort to keep youngsters off lawns and yards, and to prevent impromptu football games in the public highways.

named Franklin L. Dodge, former department of justice agent at Cleveland as co-respondent.

Remus served his jail sentence at Troy, and at Portsmouth. Mrs. Remus and Dodge were arrested here on a telephoned warrant from Portsmouth and charged with having defrauded one "Frank Brehm" in connection with the removal of whiskey from a government warehouse. The case was dismissed when the Hamilton county courts asked that "Frank Brehm" appear here.

Before acquiring his bootleg reputation Remus was an obscure lawyer in Chicago. His wife formerly was his law clerk. They were married in 1920.

Remus is said to have been born in Germany 49 years ago, but the exact date and time of his birth has been a matter of still another controversy, which resulted in an investigation by the immigration authorities, with a view to deporting him, on the ground that he was an alien, soon after his completion of his sentence in the Atlanta penitentiary. Insufficient evidence that Remus was not entitled to citizenship, however, resulted in this case being dropped.

Remus bought up distilleries with the advent of prohibition and organized what federal officials characterized as one of the most complete bootlegging syndicates in the country. Deliveries of liquor illegally withdrawn from the warehouses was made by truck from his Shadyside farm throughout the middlewest.

He was finally indicted by a federal grand jury for liquor conspiracy, sentenced to a year and a day in federal prison, and later sentenced to a year in county jail at Troy, O., for liquor violations. He was released from jail about three months ago.

At that time, he issued a long statement, blaming his wife for his trouble, and reviling her. He announced he would return to his Cincinnati home and write a book exposing the "evils of prohibition."

Remus, according to his friends, is reported to have made several millions of dollars by his bootlegging operations, and it is said that much of this money he still has, having invested it in conservative securities when he went to prison.

RELIEVE PILES QUICK WITHOUT OPERATIONS

Internal Remedy Ends Pain And Suffering In Few Hours Users Say. AMAZING DISCOVERY WORKS VERY SIMPLE

I'll say frankly I was skeptical about any pills swallowed with a glass of water, helping my long standing case of piles but now I want to tell the world they help the pain almost instantly and soon cause all the distressing symptoms to vanish as if by magic," declared another long suffering man, Frank Peters, of Attleboro, Mass.

It's nice to know that at last, no matter how long or how severely one has suffered, they can forget nasty salves, suppositories, or ugly operations and be relieved in a simple, scientific, harmless fashion. Thanks to modern chemistry, they now put herbal medicines into a tablet, which relieves the pain—help nature eliminate the cause, and banish such troubles. These tablets are then coated with a new substance impervious to gastric juices. You swallow a couple each meal with a glass of water and they pass through the stomach into the bowels where they dissolve, heal and soothe as no external application could possibly do.

Thousands of tests prove internal treatment most effective for real and lasting results. So certain are results, several local drug stores offer to refund users money if not relieved completely. Certainly no one suffering the pains and discomfort of piles or hemorrhoids need foolishly suffer longer. Your druggist has Colace Pile Pills, 60c.

High Eleven To Be Idle On Saturday

Hurst Puts Squad Through Tackling Practice.

Unable to book the brand of attraction desired for a home attraction, Joe Hurst's high school gridders will be idle Saturday and, in view of a number of tough breaks that have hit the Blue and White camp in the last few days, the rest will not come amiss.

Tackling has been the order of the day in recent workout sessions, as the local mentor strives to polish up this particular phase of the squad's work.

The team as a whole has performed up to the handle in other departments but has evidenced need of a little more defensive work.

A tackling dummy was strung up this other day at Patterson Field and the squad has been hammering it rather lively for the past couple of nights.

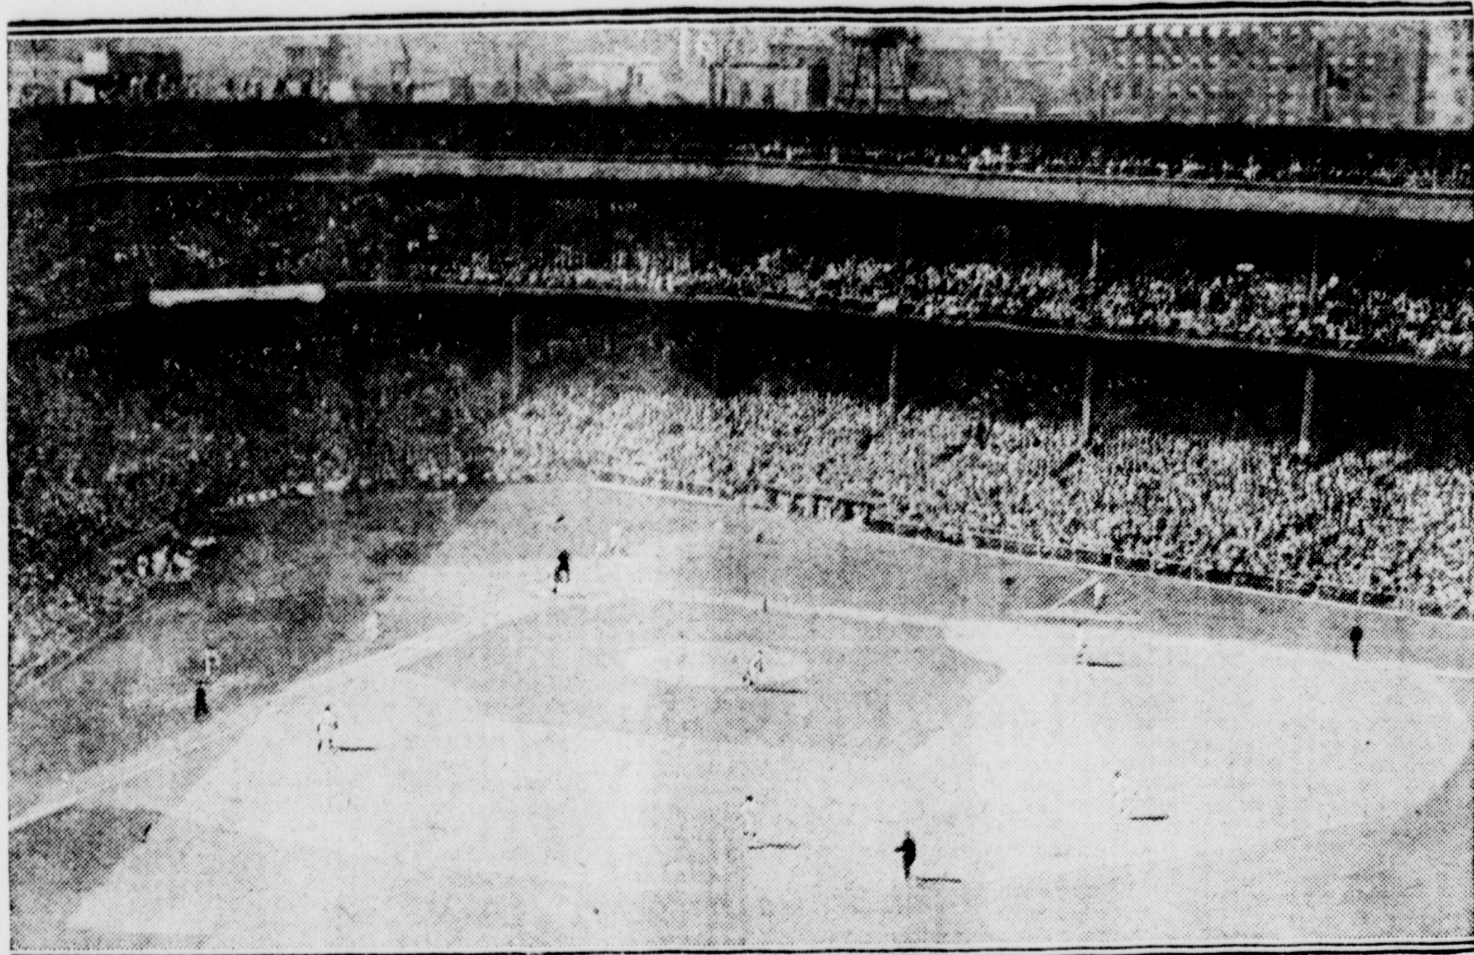

This will continue as the major part of the practice program the remainder of the week and considerable attention will be given it next week in preparation for the game at East Palestine.

This week's rest will give Deems' injured leg a chance to come around again and permit other members of the squad to nurse their bumps a little.

SELECTS ALDRIDGE FOR HURLING DUTY

Gooch Behind Bat; George Pipgras and Pat Collins Yanks' Battery; Bucs Rely on Curve Ball Strategy.

By James L. Kilgallen.
PITTSBURGH, Oct. 6.—One down to the New York Yankees in the world series but not at all discouraged, the Pittsburgh Pirates today were grimly determined to square accounts with the Yanks at Forbes field. With that objective in view Manager Douie Bush indicated he would send the veteran Vic Aldridge in to pitch against Babe Ruth and the other New York sluggers. John Gooch probably will catch Aldridge.

George Pipgras and Pat Collins will undoubtedly be the battery for the Yankees, Manager Miller Huggins announced.

Neither Manager Bush or the Pirates were discouraged by the 5 to 4 defeat of the Pirates in the opening game before 41,467 fans. "I think it will be one victory a piece by night-fall," Bush declared this morning. "I think our pitchers can stop the Yanks."

The strategy of the Pittsburgh pitchers now seems to be to "curve ball" the Yankee sluggers. Almost two out of three balls so far thrown to the Yanks have been curves and while Pittsburgh came out on the wrong end of the score yesterday the Yanks were able to make only six hits, three of them by Ruth, all singles. The Pirates got nine hits. The Pittsburgh club is now convinced that the Yanks do not like curves.

Keep him on the bench today and may be for the series.

The Pittsburgh fans seemed to resent the work of Ruth in hitting mere singles. They don't want him to hit at all, but they think they are cheated when he doesn't wreck a fence when he does hit. Babe is anxious not to disappoint them in this respect.

Where Was Cuyler?

Manager Bush's decision not to send Kiki Cuyler, heavy hitting outfielder, in to pinch hit has created a flurry of discussion. With the great Cuyler on the bench, Bush selected a substitute outfielder, Fred Brickell, to pinch hit for Miljus in the ninth and the best Brickell could do was to tap weakly to the pitcher.

"Why didn't he use Cuyler?" is the question asked on all sides today.

Paul Waner, one of Pittsburgh's idols, remained on the pedestal local fandom has placed him. His three hits, one of them a double, furnished one of the few bright spots for the home town fans. Today Waner and the series, are leading the batting Ruth, the best publicized players in averages, each with a mark of .750.

All reserved seats for this afternoon's game have been sold. The only seats left are for the temporary bleachers in center field and standing room. The police continued active in seizing ticket speculators, eleven men having been arrested and 100 tickets confiscated in the last 24 hours. Although there was a tremendous crush at the gates yesterday only one casualty was reported. The victim, Edward Schwartz, 20, of Wilkensburg, Pa., was injured when he fell while climbing one of the walls at the ball park.

Ruth Confident

But the Yanks think otherwise. "It won't be long now," said Ruth this morning. "I fell hot. I've got to hit some longer ones but I'm not kicking on those singles I made. I like Kremer's pitching. My first two hits clicked just right and I would have got another off Kremer the third time up, I think, if I hadn't slipped as I was swinging."

Ruth praised the Waner brothers, Lloyd and Paul, as "a couple of good ball players," adding: "They sure popped a few out my way."

Joe Harris, Pirates' first baseman, expressed the general sentiment of the Pittsburgh team when he said: "Any team that gets five runs on six hits is mighty lucky. Aside from Ruth, we had those heavy hitters stopped in their tracks. Kremer will get better support next time and he'll know better how to pitch to Ruth."

Ray Kremer, the Pirates' pitching ace, was greatly disappointed at his showing but said he expected to do better the next time he starts. Waite Hoyt, the Yanks' starting pitcher in the series, said he "didn't mind" being knocked out of the box because it was "all in the game" and, besides, he realizes he wasn't "right."

Laud Relief Stars

High praise was given by the ball players to both relief pitchers in the opening game. Wiley Moore for the Yanks, and John Miljus, the big Pittsburgh right-hander. It was freely predicted that both of them will be given an opportunity soon to start a game. Moore stopped the Pirates dead when they became threatening in the eighth and turned them back in one, two, three order in the ninth, while Miljus held the Yanks to one hit in the four innings he was on the mound.

Another capacity crowd was expected to turn out this afternoon to see the Pirates battle to turn the tide. The great crowd that packed every inch of space inside Forbes field at the opening game was disappointed at the collapse of the highly-touted Kremer and the bungles of Grantham and Smith. Catcher Smith's failure to get Gehrig when he had him trapped between third and home will probably

MOORE AND MILJUS WIN HURLING GLORY

Understudies Steal Principals' Thunder in Opening Series Game as Hoyt and Kremer are Shelled From Slab.

By Les Conklin.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 6.—Wiley Moore, a big, rangy, easy-going Oklahoma farmer, and John Miljus a World war veteran who had been hibernating in the minors for six long years unexpectedly found themselves basking in the world series spotlight today. These two members of the pitching ensemble starred in the opening game of the series after Waite Hoyt and Remy Kremer, the featured and high-salaried performers of the greatest show on earth, had faltered and were shelled off the landscape.

The understudies stole the principals' thunder. Moore sank the Pirate craft with his sinker ball, and Miljus held the New York sluggers to one hit, an undernourished single by Ruth, in four innings. Ruth's hit caused no panic as Miljus immediately made the Babe look like a first-class sucker by trapping him off first base.

Moore, the greatest relief pitcher in the big show during the past season, is a horse for work and he knows his oats thoroughly. Miljus, with a name that sounds like a new brand of four per cent beer, and a brand of pitching that appears to be even better, was one of the greatest factors in Pittsburgh's pennant-winning drive down the National league stretch.

Success Comes Late. Success has come to both men late in their baseball careers. Miljus is in his thirty-third year and Moore is no spring chicken. The story of their overnight jump into the hall of fame reads like the fables of office slaves who were promoted to executive positions in a week's time by the simple method of marking an "X" here, signing the coupon and mailing it in immediately.

Both Moore and Miljus are new certain of starting one of the remaining games, and one of them may turn out to be the hero of the series. Miljus pitched for the Giants and the Robins a dozen years ago, but until this season Moore thought that a major league was an association of army officers.

Miljus Home-Town Product. The case of Miljus recalls the history of the prophet who was without honor in his own home town. He lives in a Pittsburgh suburb, and twirled for the Pittsburgh Federals years ago, but the Pirates never gave him a tumble until this season.

Moore, the shy, grinning, awkward farmer, was cooler than a city apartment in January when he faced the Pirate sluggers. After being tagged for one run, he stopped the Bucs dead. Miljus, a veteran of the front-line trenches in France, silenced the Yankee siege guns with equal effectiveness.

Moore Joe Harris, a buddy of Miljus overseas, tried to help his old pal pull the game out of the fire. Joe drove in one run with a single, but his mates failed to continue the barrage.

Chickens Home to Roost. Chickens came home to roost when Earl Smith, who "got the goats" of Bucky Harris and Goose Goslin in the 1925 series, pulled a boner and qualified as the first goat this year. He let a costly New York run over the plate. When Gehrig started for the plate as part of a double steal in the third inning, Smitty waited until Gehrig was almost home and then threw the ball to Traynor. "Oil" then made it a perfect day by mufing Traynor's lightning throw to the plate.

The tip-off on Smitty today was seen in a report that he would be replaced behind the bat by Johnny Gooch.

"The Flying Dutchman." After watching Gehrig fly around the bases on his triple, driving in the first run, the Pirates went to a local movie house to seek forgetfulness. The picture showing was "The Flying Dutchman."

ZUPPKE DRILLS PUNTING SQUAD

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 6.—Punters were to be busy on the gridiron today according to the schedule ordered by Head Coach Bob Zuppke and his aids. Interference and blocking are being stressed. Garland Grange is showing form at end. D'Ambrosio at fullback is attracting attention. Mills, Walker, Aldous, Nowak and Mills are being drilled in punting and booting field goals.

Terris, M'Graw Will Settle Mitt Debate

Fight Tonight for Shot at Mandell's Crown.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The long-standing fistic debate between Sid Terris, East Side lightweight, and Phil McGraw, of Detroit, on the question of who is better suited to meet Sammy Mandell for the lightweight championship, is expected to be decided at Eb-bets field tonight.

The fight is a critical one for both battlers. Terris hopes to wipe out the defeat administered him recently by Hilarie Martinez and McGraw is equally anxious to square up for Terris' close victory over him of August 24. Exceptional interest has been manifested in the bout, and a record turnout is expected. The fight will be broadcast.

HAWKEYE SQUAD NEEDS TWO ENDS

IOWA CITY, Iowa, Oct. 6.—Hawkeye coaches were still frantically trying to develop two ends and a punter of some merit today, in efforts to polish up Iowa's offense against the formidable Buckeye squad next Saturday. Cuhel, the halfback, has been shifted to end and with Grimm on the opposite flank is expected to start in the game against Ohio State.

RIVALS ASPIRING TO CHAMPIONSHIP

Defeat for Either May Ruin Hopes for Sectional Title; Yale Billed For Tough Session With Georgia.

By Malcolm Roy.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Unabashed by all the hub-bub over the world's series, football takes a running hop, step and jump right into mid-season dollops on Saturday. The Pennsylvania Brown clash at Franklin field, Philadelphia, probably stands forth as the principal attraction, but the big intersectional battles at Cambridge and New Haven when Harvard tackles Purdue, of the western conference, and Yale plays the host to the aspiring University of Georgia eleven, respectively, are only a shade less appealing.

Victory means well nigh everything both to Pennsylvania and Brown. Each aspires to the football championship of the east. Brown is relying strongly on seven of the nine "iron" men who on successive Saturdays last season defeated both Yale and Dartmouth.

Brown Powerful Eleven. Tuss McLaughry, the Brown coach, has whipped together a powerful, alert eleven that is respected if not feared by Pennsylvania, coaches and players alike. So carefully have the Quakers prepared for Brown that at each of the games the Providence eleven has played no less than three scouts, headed by Charlie (Kid) Keimath, have been on hand diagnosing each and every play the Brunonians put on.

That the game will be a real battle from the opening whistle is a certainty. Brown's plan of campaign is to get the jump on the other team and hold it while Pennsylvania, as a result of Keimath's observations, believes that if it can do no more than hang on doggedly for the first half, it will so shake the confidence of Brown and wear down its morale that there should be relatively little difficulty in going through for a victory in the second half.

Pennsylvania's ace is Paul Scull but Young has two other fine backs in Murphy and Wasson. On the whole the edge seems to be with Brown.

Yale Has Hands Full. In taking on Georgia as its second opponent of the season Yale apparently was not using that degree of foresight that usually is a necessary part of the schedule maker's equipment. The blue had some trouble in defeating Georgia in 1926. The score of the game was 19 to 0 but it was not a fair measure of the difference between the two teams, Georgia having carried the first to the blue and having deserved a closer score. However, Georgia does not look as alluring to the blue this week for the reason that the crackers turned to and trounced Virginia last Saturday by a score of 32 to 0.

Harvard, likewise, will probably catch a tartar in the Purdue university team which comes to Cambridge as the first of two conference eleven to be played by the crimson this season. Purdue, while not ranged in the west as a coming champion of the conference, is nevertheless a powerful smooth running combination. That was demonstrated last week when the boiler-makers defeated De Pauw 15 to 0.

RESERVES HELP SPEARS' ELEVEN

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 6.—Doc Spears' hopes of some sturdy reserves were strengthened today when the word was passed that Art Phamer, halfback, and Fred Boardman, guard, will soon be declared eligible to play on the Minnesota squad. The two were stars of the freshmen last year and their talents on the gridiron attracted considerable attention. Knorr and Matchan were still being used in place of the Gophers' star, Herb Joesting, nursing a mashed shoulder on the sidelines.

BILLIE DOVE AT THE STRAND

Lewis Stone Also Stars in "Affair of Follies."

The famous "Hollywood Music Box Revue," known to thousands of globe trotters as one of the best shows west of Broadway, makes its film debut in "An Affair of the Follies," the gay picture of theatre and night club life in which Billie Dove, Lewis Stone and Lloyd Hughes are featured at the Strand today, tomorrow and Saturday.

To get the proper atmosphere for his picture of a show girl's romance, marriage and subsequent return to the stage, Al Rockett, who produced this gem of comedy-romance for First National, engaged the facilities of the famous West Coast musical revue. The theatre, the principals, the chorus girls and the scenery were all put into the picture and critics agree that the revue shown on the screen is as engaging as any that ever trod the boards.

Billie Dove appears as Tamara, a dancer and with her are twenty of Hollywood's best ballet performers, all performers in this Hollywood Music Box Revue.

Lloyd Hughes plays her poor husband and Lewis Stone is cast as the millionaire "daddy" of the bad head ed row.

The plot, taken from Dixie Wilson's "Here V'Are Brothers" is as convincing as it is romantic.

Sally's Shoulders

by BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN" "HONEY LOU" "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," ETC.

CHAPTER XXV.

"Won't you dance with me now?" Millie's friend, Davidson, asked, smiling down at her.

Sally could feel his gray eyes going over her face. They seemed, somehow, to be stroking it like caressing fingers. They moved on, over her neck to her slender, light figure.

She moved away from him an inch or two. She hated to be looked at like that by a man.

"Don't you want to dance with me?" he was asking her now, and she shook her head and looked around for Ted. Surely he had had plenty of time to get her wraps from the check-room.

"No, I don't want to dance any more tonight. The floor's so crowded," she answered, looking up at him.

"I'm here with Ted Sloan—you remember him, don't you?—and we just decided to go home."

"No, I don't remember him," the big blond man answered, bluntly, never taking his eyes from her. "The only person I remember meeting at your house was yourself."

Sally's color deepened and stirred. "What are you doing here?" she asked, quickly changing the subject.

She really wondered, too, what Davidson was doing in a place like the Blue Lagoon, which was a haunt of the young and gay and poor, and where dances cost but a nickel apiece. Surely he didn't belong here, with his fine linen shirt, his expensive looking clothes, and the gold cigarette case that he fiddled with as he talked.

He belonged to another world—a world of high-powered cars, road-houses that had a cover charge and private dining rooms, tailor-made clothes and chased-silver liquor flasks. Any one could tell that by looking at him.

Then, too, Sally knew that he never had taken Millie to places like the Blue Lagoon in the days when she had run around with him.

"Oh, I just dropped in on my way home from a card game," he said, indifferently. "I do, sometimes. Been doing any more cooking lately? His face lighted up as he asked her that.

"Any more cooking?" cried Sally. "Why, I cook every day of my life. Where do you suppose Ted can be? Let's go and look him up."

They started to push their way through the laughing, noisy crowd, his hand on Sally's arm above the elbow, and his big body close to hers as they moved.

"I wish you'd ask me up some night for supper," he said, in her ear. "I haven't had a real home-cooked meal for so many years that I can't remember. Will you?"

Once more she shook her small, beautifully-shaped head. "No, you're Millie's friend, and she'll have to ask you," she answered, with a little laugh. "She'd give me a terrible winking if I had anything to do with any of her men friends, let me tell you. Besides, it wouldn't be quite fair, would it?"

Then, just as they found Ted, who was trying to sell a perspiring, fat young man an automobile, he asked her a second question.

"How does a girl like Millie Jerome have a sister like you?"

Sally didn't answer that one. To begin with, she did not clearly understand what he meant by it. And besides, Davidson did not seem to be asking for a reply. He seemed to be talking to himself, as much as to her.

All the way home through the warm October night, Sally thought that question over.

But she couldn't figure out what he meant, so finally she let it go at that.

"What does it matter, anyway?" she asked herself, and promptly put both it and Davidson himself out of her mind.

The night was starry and beautiful. She loved to ride along like this, with the wind singing in her ears and the steady hum of the motor lulling her senses.

To roll back in her seat with her hands folded and her cheek against the smooth leather of the cushions—with nothing to do until tomorrow morning. Nothing to do—

Sally sighed comfortably and fell asleep.

Ted's voice awakened her. He had put one arm around her and was saying something about being "the champion one-armed driver in the United States."

"Oh, no, you're not! Not tonight, anyway!" Sally informed him, witheringly, and put his hand back on the driving wheel, where it belonged.

"That reminds me. I owe you two dollars for the first payment on Beau's check," she added, fishing in her little purse for two one-dollar bills, that she had folded there that afternoon.

Without a word Ted took them. He raced his car all the rest of the way home, and did not say "Goodnight" when he left her—not at her door, but at his own on the first floor.

Millie was having a midnight lunch and listening to the radio in the dining room when Sally walked into the flat.

"My Johnny got some new batteries for the gold-durned thing," she remarked, between bites of sardine sandwich. "We were going to a show to-night, but we decided to stay at home instead. He's just left."

The radio—bought by Beau ages ago and paid for by Sally—never had worked. But now it filled the rooms with clear, enchanted music—music that seemed never to be real to Sally, picked out of the air as it was. The melody was the old "Merry Widow" waltz, played by some distant orchestra, and it was like a lullaby after the jazz of the Blue Lagoon.

"I bumped into your friend, Davidson, tonight," she said, sitting down opposite her sister, at the table.

Millie shrugged her shoulders. She had a fork in her hand, and she was waving a cigarette in her left one. Her satin-shod feet were graced against the edge of the table, and she was a perfect picture of lazy grace and sublime indifference.

"And what did he have to say for himself?" she drawled, and yawned as if she were too dead-tired to listen.

But there was a gleam of curiosity in the blue eyes with their long, golden lashes. "Did he say anything about me?"

"Of course," Sally told her. "He asked about you."

Millie yawned again, patting her small pink flower of a mouth with two slender fingers.

"Let's see what happened while you were gone tonight," she murmured, wearily. "Oh, yes, Aunt Em stopped in and asked us all out to her house for dinner tomorrow. And a check came from Dad at last! For two hundred dollars!"

Two hundred dollars! . . . Almost enough to pay the debt of Ted Sloan and the one to Mr. Peevy! Beau's debts.

"And then I'd have my own money clear for the house, thought Sally. 'I could pay the rent next week.' She was always a couple of weeks behind with the rent, somehow.

"Mother's going to buy Beau and Mabel something with a hundred of it, so she says. But I made her promise me the rest of it. I've just got to have some fall clothes, if I'm going to trot around with John Nye," whined Millie. "I look like a scrap-bag as it is, and even Mother has sense enough to see that I've got to look decent if I'm going to land a man like him."

She pushed her chair back from the table and stood up.

"There was something wrong with the water-heater tonight," she yawned, "and there's only enough hot water for one bath. That's your hard luck, Sally."

And she vanished into the bathroom to take the nightly hot bath, that both girls took religiously—when there was enough hot water. Usually there was not!

Left alone, Sally stood looking down at the two radio batteries standing on the floor of the room, under the windows. She looked at them for a long time, and then she bent down and just touched them with her fingers, very gently, as she might have touched the lean, tanned hands of the man who had set them there.

She turned on the lights and went to bed.

Aunt Emily's dinner the next day was a family picnic.

For the day was hot and sunshiny Sunday, and the trees in Aunt Emily's garden were still green and fresh. Lacy shadows patterned the grass beneath the old elm tree, where Aunt Emily had laid a long tablecloth.

Beau and Mabel were there when the others arrived, and Mabel kissed everybody and the quarrel was made up.

"And now everything's just fine again," said Mrs. Jerome said placidly, as she took her third helping of chicken salad.

Mrs. Jerome was more than likely to think that everything in the world was "just fine" so long as she had plenty of chicken salad, a comfortable garden chair, and a daughter to brush the flies and mosquitoes away from her, as Sally was doing now.

But it seemed that everything in the family was not "just fine."

For after dinner Mabel drew Sally away, behind the currant bushes along the fence, and told her a story of disillusion and disgust.

"I'm just having the most awful time with Beau," she began, hotly, not looking at Sally as she talked. "He got paid yesterday noon, and last night at 5 o'clock he sailed in with half of his salary gone. He knows a bookmaker, and he'd been playing the races. He picked the wrong horse, of course. You'd just know he would! And he wears so many clean clothes! You should have seen our laundry bill this week, and I had to pay it! What he had left last night he spent on a quart of liquor and a big tin of cigarettes."

"He's always spent his money that way. I've told you so a thousand times," Sally spoke gravely, her compassionate, understanding eyes on the unhappy face beside her.

"I know you have! But I never believed you 'till now," Mabel answered, frankly. "You see, I was so much in love with him—"

"Aren't you still?" interrupted Sally. "You've been married only a week, you know."

Mabel put her head down on her knees and began to cry.

"Sure, I'm in love with him," she wept. "Do you think I'd stay with him, and pay his board bill and his laundry bill if I didn't love him? I spent every nickel of my salary except five dollars yesterday, Sally, settling up for the week—I tell you, we're just up against it!"

Very slowly Sally opened her little gray leather handbag, and took out a five-dollar bill from it. She knew what she was expected to do, and she did it.

"I can only lend you this, Mabel," she said, folding it into Mabel's eager little paw. "Mother was going to buy you a wedding present, but I'll try to persuade her to give you the money instead. And then you'll have to pay this money back to me. I'm sorry, but I've got to have it again."

"Sure, I'll pay it back! You know I will!" And Mabel jumped up, brushed the tears from her eyes, gave her skirts a shake and was herself again.

"You're a sweet cookie!" she declared, flatteringly, and hid the money in the top of her rolled stocking.

one of the bandits ushered Johnson into a back room, while the other courteously asked the woman what she wished. "A can of beans, please," "It's a lovely day," observed the bandit, while he wrapped the can. He rang up 15 cents, then emptied the register of $55, called his companion, and both disappeared.

It's the Smoothest motor a car ever had

Here's the most startling development in the whole history of 6-cylinder engineering—the Nash 7-BEARING motor.

Take the wheel of this Advanced Six 4-Door Sedan for thirty minutes and then you'll realize how much a 4-bearing CAN'T do that a 7-bearing one DOES.

It's the SMOOTHEST motor that ever powered an automobile—full pressure lubricated to prevent noise and wear.

There's not a hint of vibration all through the full range of power and speed.

Nash balances clutch, flywheel, and crankshaft as a single unit to make that absolutely certain.

Note the rich interior of this model. The luxurious genuine tufted mohair upholstery. The attractive vanity case and smoking set, leather mounted.

Observe that Nash uses genuine walnut for the steering wheel. And the instrument board, as well as the crown panel above, the window moldings and door panels, are done in walnut finish.

Bring your car in when you come to see this Advanced Six Sedan. You'll get the greatest LIBERALITY in terms. DRIVE around today.

WASHINGTON STEWART'S LETTER

MAGRUDER RAPS NAVAL SETUP, BUT DOES IT IN "PROPER" WAY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder certainly is in considerable disfavor with his fellow officers of the navy, on account of the rough things he recently said about the navy, but the feeling against him is nothing to compare with the army's against Col. "Billy" Mitchell, at the time of the latter's aviation outbreak—and even yet, for that matter, though some of the edge was taken off from it in the colonel's case, by the satisfaction his outraged associates got out of bouncing him from the service.

Magruder found fault with the navy, to be sure, but, after all, he didn't say it ought to be abolished. He said it has too many officers, but not 100 percent too many. Mitchell put it that surface armies and navies alike are obsolete—absolutely—and that all connected with them are out-and-out parasites, except possibly a few orderlies, to run errands for airmen.

Naval officers speak in a hurt tone of what they term the "injustice" of Magruder's criticisms. Army officers called Mitchell names that couldn't be printed.

ANOTHER very important difference between Magruder and Mitchell—Magruder got into the navy through the professionals' entrance—Annapolis—and won his way upward from commission to commission. Mitchell rose from the ranks, in the army.

Theoretically army and navy officers draw no distinction between the original West Point or Annapolis product and the former enlisted man who has earned his shoulder straps. Probably they don't intend to, but practically the former's "one of us," while the latter, at best, is no "old college chum" anyway. At worst, though nobody will refer to him as an "upstart," it obviously is impossible to keep anybody who thinks so from thinking just that.

MAGRUDER, too, can be called on—in fact, he has been, informally, and undoubtedly will be given an opportunity later—to prove his charges, and if he can't do it, he'll have to back water.

Admiral Sims placed himself in a similar position a good many years ago. He made all kinds of fun of American naval marksmanship. Col. Roosevelt, who was at the helm then, promptly summoned him to improve it, and Sims, given the necessary authority, did improve it.

There's something tangible about complaints like Sims' and Magruder's. They can be tested. If they don't stand the test, the navy chortles, of course. If they do, it has, even against the grain, to admit it.

MOREOVER, Magruder and Sims are navy men, criticizing the navy, on which they're experts, and doing it in parliamentary language.

Mitchell, on the other hand, an

LOIS WILSON AT THE STRAND

"Broadway Nights"
Story of New York
Night Life.

New York's night life blossomed at noon all last month in the Cosmopolitan Studio, where Robert Kane rounded up some of the best known night owls of the White Way for his new First National picture, "Broadway Nights," featuring Sam Hardy and Lois Wilson at the Strand today and tomorrow.

Louise Jeffries and her "gang," performers from the Everglades Club; "Bunny" Weldon, dean of the night club producers, who, incidentally, had a lot to do with "Colette," the new operetta headed toward New York from Philadelphia; Louis John Barrels, of "Show-Off fame; Henry Sherwood, from the cast of "Broadway," and Barbara Stanwick, from "The Noose," were among those taking bit parts in the movie.

The film was made from Forrest Halsey's adaptation of Norman Houston's original story; a tale of a honky-tonk hooper and her gambling husband who finally win electric lights on Broadway.

Earl Roebuck, who wrote the continuity, and Charlie Maguire acted as assistant directors, with Ernest Haller and Billy Schurr at the cameras. Robert Haas, assisted by Ben Stearns, turned out some of the most original sets ever built in the Cosmopolitan. Ben Berk, former location manager for First National's Eastern studio, was in charge of properties.

Joe Boyle directed, an assignment given him by Kane in recognition of his capable work on "Convoy," the navy epic just finished, which First National soon is to release as its first special of 1927.

And now, we suppose, convicted holdup men will nominate their better halves to carry on during an enforced absence.—Cincinnati Times Star.

I WISH YOU'D GIVE ME A CHECK FOR THE MAID'S SALARY — IT IS DUE TODAY AND I DON'T WANT TO HAVE HER ASK ME FOR IT —

Sally's Shoulders

by BEATRICE BURTON, Author of

"HER MAN" "HONEY LOU" "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL" ETC.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Late that afternoon, when long blue-gray shadows lay across Aunt Emily's lawn, a big, brown car drove in between the gateposts and came to a stop before the steps of the house.

"Why—it's John Nye!" Sally cried, her wistful eyes on the tall, dark, good-looking man who swung himself out of it. Something in her voice made Aunt Emily give her a sharp, quick look before she trotted briskly away to welcome him.

"So it is!" drawled Millie, pulling herself up from the basket chair where she had been taking a quiet cat nap. He said last night he might drive out to get me today—"He can take us ALL home and we won't have to ride the crowded street car!" Mrs. Jerome broke in eagerly. Before Millie could stop her she was half-way across the lawn, calling out to him.

"Oh, Mr. Nye, how nice of you—I'll go right in and get my hat and be ready in a minute!" She went up the steps with a swiftness that she had not shown in years. Mabel burst into a laugh. "Well, look at the old girl go, will you!" she giggled. "She sure can show some speed when she wants to, can't she?" Mabel probably never had read the Ten Commandments, and knew nothing about honoring her mother and father—or her mother-in-law or anyone else, for that matter. She had no respect for anyone, really. She laughed again, and Beau laughed with her.

Millie gave them a blighting look. "How can you laugh about a thing like that?" she asked bitterly. "I think it's terrible—wishing herself on him for a ride! When she knows perfectly well that he came out for me and for nobody else!—could just shake her!"

Mabel, still giggling, turned to Beau. "Well, as long as your mother's going to drive in with Mr. Nye, you and I may as well go along, too," she said to him. "Come on, darling." They jumped up from the grass where they had been sitting, holding hands. They were still in that blissful honeymoon state where they were not happy unless they were making love to each other.

Millie, groaned, watching them cross the lawn with their arms linked lovingly. They got into John Nye's car as if they owned it.

"Isn't that the pink limit?—Wishing the whole family on him?" she appeared disgustedly to Sally, as she shook out her rumpled pink dress and fluffed up her tousled yellow hair. "Well, come along, we may as well start."

But Sally shook her head and did not stir from her cushion on the grass. "No, thanks, Millie. I'm going to stay and have supper with Aunt Em," she said quietly and firmly. Not for worlds would she have driven off in John Nye's car behind him and Millie. Not for anything.

She stayed where she was, holding up a magazine in front of her as if she were reading. She did not lower it until she heard Aunt Emily calling "Good-bye" to everyone, and then the low murmur of the brown car as it started away.

"Was I very rude?" she asked when Aunt Emily, trim and severe in gray linen, came back across the smooth grass to her. "And do you mind if I stay for supper? I invited myself." She put down the magazine.

Aunt Emily did not seem to have heard her questions. She stood squarely in front of her, with her piercing eyes on Sally's big blue eyes.

"Sally!" she said firmly. "You like that man of Millie's, don't you?" The question came so unexpectedly that Sally answered it almost without thinking. She answered it with a short little nod of her head and a "Yes" that was more like a quick sigh than a word.

And then she found herself telling her aunt all about it. Aunt Emily, for all her snap and matter-of-factness, was the kind of person to whom other people go with their troubles and their confessions.

Confession is good for the soul, and it has a way of taking a load off the heart, too. And Sally felt a certain relief when she had told Aunt Emily the whole story.

"It's silly to say I'm in love with him," she wound up, looking dreamily across the garden at the autumn roses, dimly pink in the dusk, "but I think I am—without really knowing him, Aunt Emily. I saw him one day in the elevator in our building, and the next minute I was so in love with him that I couldn't take my eyes from him."

Aunt Emily smiled. Her smile was a mere quiver of her straight mouth. "I wouldn't give much for that sort of love," she said. "That isn't the real kind. You've got to know a person to really know that you love him, my dear child."

Sally's face brightened a little. "I hope that's true," she declared. "I hope this is just a passing fancy—I wish I didn't think about John Nye all the time. It bothers me, and I'd like to get over it."

"You probably will. Love's like the moon. It hurts while it lasts, but it doesn't last forever."

Aunt Emily began to pick up the cushions from the grass and set the basket chairs up against the old willow tree.

"Let's go in and get something to eat, and then I'll walk down to the car line with you," she said. "Let's see, there's cold chicken and tongue and some tomatoes."

There were a good many other things on the table in the cool, peaceful dining room—peaches and cold biscuits and two kinds of cake.

But Sally ate almost nothing. Aunt Emily noticed that while she chatted about the changes she was going to make in the house as soon as she started serving chicken dinners to the public.

"I'm going to have the dining room and the parlor thrown into one room," she explained, looking through the doorway at the big shadowy room beyond the dining room.

It was the loveliest room Sally had ever seen. A room of faded flowery chintzes, dim old family portraits in gilt frames, and blue Bristol glass vases filled with Aunt Emily's fall roses.

All her life it had been a pleasure to Sally to think that she belonged to a family who had owned a room like that. It was the kind of room that fine, gentle people had lived in. People of good taste. People who had had a love for beautiful, simple things just as Sally herself loved them.

"I hate to think of your spoiling the house that way," she told Aunt Emily later when they were waiting in the hot thick darkness for a street car.

Her aunt grunted. "The world 'do move,' my dear, and I'm going to keep moving with it!" she replied. "And I'm sick and tired of staying in my school teaching rut any longer. If this new thing means giving up part of my house, I don't care! I wish you'd come into it with me."

Sally shook her head. "I can't," she said decidedly. "Not just now. We've a load of debts that have got to be paid off, and fall's coming on and we've all got to have new coats and things. No, I can't quit my job right now. It's a sure thing, and doesn't take all of my time."

Aunt Emily was silent for a minute. Then she said "Hummm!" She said it scornfully.

"Let's go in and have something to drink," she suggested, taking Sally's arm to lead her into the drug store on the corner.

"Two root beers," she told the clerk, and while he was fixing them she lifted the glass top over a plate of sandwiches on the marble counter.

"Just look at those dried-up things! And they get 10 cents apiece for them!" she whispered to her niece.

"I know people will pay $2 for the kind of food I'm going to serve! I'll bet you anything that inside of a year, Sally Jerome, I'll own an automobile, besides! I'm going to make money in this wayside inn business—and if you have any brains you'd better come in with me!" She was stubborn, was Aunt Emily, and she hated to take "No" for an answer when "Yes" was what she wanted.

But "No" was what Sally said once more. She said it regretfully, for, like her aunt, she had a love of adventure. The thing untold was the thing that lured her always.

"I can't," she said. "If I had a hundred dollars ahead, I would. But I haven't got it."

For an instant she thought of the $100 that Millie had coaxed from her mother for new clothes.

"I might ask for that," she said to herself, but she knew it would be useless. Millie never gave up anything she wanted, once she got her soft, grasping hands upon it.

"All right. Give up everything for your family if you want to!" snapped Aunt Emily. "Now that Beau's married, there's no reason why your mother and Millie couldn't live on what they have for a while. Your mother gets her checks every now and then. She kept you all on them when you were little children."

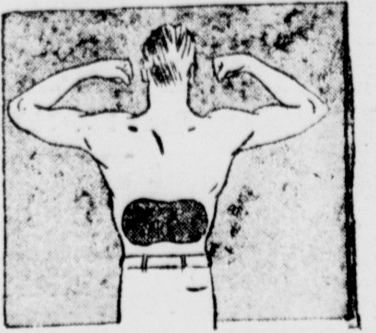

"Yes, but she's turning them all over to Beau and Millie now!" Sally wanted to say, but she did not. She looked at her glass with downcast eyes and said nothing at all. No use to rattle the family skeletons before Aunt Emily.

"I carried all my family's burdens when I was your age," snapped Aunt Emily. "And look at me now—an old maid with barely enough to get along on! And I've made plenty of money in my day, Sally. I gave most of it away—to my family. They all had it from me—and not one of them ever paid me back or said 'Thank you'!"

Sally raised her eyes then and looked at her.

"I expect to be an old maid myself."

Aunt Em," she said. "And I expect to be a poor old maid—and I'm not worrying over it. Somebody's got to look after mother and I'm glad I'm the one to do it. And somebody's got to look after Millie until she's married!" "It looks to me as if she were going to marry this Nye," observed the older woman. "And if she does, I certainly am going to be sorry for him." (To be continued.)
